Local People, Local Solutions. A Guide to FIRST NATION Co-operative Development in Saskatchewan
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This handbook is a joint initiative of the Saskatchewan First Nations Economic Development Network (SFNEDN) and the Saskatchewan Co-operative Association (SCA).

We would like to extend our gratitude to the many people who contributed to the research and realization of this handbook.

We would like to thank the many Elders, including Maria and Walter Linklater, who patiently and generously contributed their knowledge of First Nation co-operative values and practices.

Special thanks to Chris Sicotte, Affinity Credit Union, Patrick Lapointe of SCA, and Milton Tootoosis, Office of the Treaty Commissioner, for their support and contributions. Thanks to Kathy Walker and Anthony Santoro for their contributions to the content of this guide. Thanks to Scott Kim for permission to use some of his photos. And thanks to Audrey Mowchenko of Greenappledesign for her additional contributions to the content.

Finally, we gratefully acknowledge the Co-operatives and Mutuals Canada First Nations, Metis, and Inuit Co-op Development Fund and the Office of the Treaty Commissioner for their financial and in-kind support of this project.

The information in this document is not a comprehensive overview of the legal and administrative aspects of co-operative development. The information is not to be solely utilized as the primary basis of any transaction or legal opinion.

The objective of this document is to act as a guide to co-operative development and to facilitate a general understanding of the regulatory environment and suggested processes of developing a co-operative for First Nations to participate in economic development.

Readers are advised to seek legal and professional expertise prior to entering any legal agreements or pursuing any legal transactions.
ABOUT US

The SFNEDN assists First Nation economic development practitioners and corporations in becoming better integrated into the provincial economy. Housed at the Office of the Treaty Commissioner, it is a member driven, not for profit organization with strategic priorities to assist and promote First Nation economic development, capacity-building through partnership engagement and the forging of new effective partnerships.

SCA is a provincial coalition of co-operatives and credit unions. Incorporated as a community service co-operative, SCA works to support and promote the co-operative model for community and economic development. SCA educates young people about co-operatives, leadership and teamwork, provides co-operative development services, and educates people in Saskatchewan about co-operatives.

INTRODUCTION

First Nation peoples are facing a wide range of challenges as they seek to secure the future of members of the communities, including future generations. In seeking to create sustainable communities, economically, socially, and politically, First Nations must also try to develop ways to circulate financial resources as frequently as possible within their communities, rather than see the money used at other businesses outside the community.

Communities have four options to consider, they can: choose to foster the development of individual entrepreneurs, form alliances with “Corporate Canada,” develop the capacity of Aboriginal governmental organizations (band councils), or encourage the development of co-operatives that both function in the marketplace to serve their members’ needs and work together, with clear lines of accountability. Each type of economic activity has its place in a strong economy, with no single type of activity able to meet all economic challenges on its own.

A co-operative is one accommodating approach that First Nation communities can come together collectively to meet the economic needs of a community. Co-operatives are not a new form of organization within Canadian First Nation communities. Co-ops exist in many sectors of the Canadian economy such as fishing, energy, forestry, housing, financial services, consumer goods, and arts and crafts. Co-ops fill an important role in economic capacity-building, providing skills development, business development, mentoring, and employment.

The purpose of this guide is to increase your understanding of co-operatives and co-operative business development, and to assist you in deciding whether a co-operative is a good fit for your community in pursuing economic development.

There are several reasons the Saskatchewan First Nations Economic Development Network (SFNEDN) and the Saskatchewan Co-operative Association (SCA) believe this guidebook may be of interest:

1. There are similarities between First Nation and co-operative values
2. The co-operative structure is flexible to fit communities’ needs and goals
3. A co-op can be made to suit the cultural desires of the community
4. A co-operative is twice as likely to survive as a corporation because it accommodates communal expectations
5. First nations communities may find that co-operative business offer more options
6. The co-operative business model is a useful and needed part of the mix of economic activity for Aboriginal communities

ABOUT CO-OPS

WHAT IS A CO-OP?
The co-op model has many applications. A co-operative is a legal business structure. A co-op is formed by a group of people who want to provide themselves with goods and services, to produce and sell the products of their labour, or to create their own jobs. Co-operatives are owned in common by their members and operated under democratic principles (one member, one vote).

BENEFITS OF A CO-OP
Co-operatives can be established in any sector of the economy depending on the need. Co-ops provide a business structure through which primary producers, such as farmers and fishers, can work together to reduce costs and maintain a fair price for their products.

Co-ops can provide community services such as health care, childcare and housing. Co-ops combine economic and social objectives in their business pursuits. By providing a model for community economic development, they generate community investment facilitating local control of resource development.

- Canada is home to 8,500 Co-operatives and Credit Unions, with over 18 million members
- 1,280 co-operatives operate in Saskatchewan with over 1 million members - more than 50% of the population!
- 133 co-operatives in Canada are First Nation, Metis, or Inuit-controlled or operated. Of these co-operatives 77 are in the Northwest Territories, Nunavut, Nunavik, Northern Quebec and Northern Saskatchewan
- In Saskatchewan, 15,000 people work at co-operatives, in Canada - 150,000, and over 100 million people globally
- First Nations and Metis-controlled co-operatives employ 1,400 people with an average of 18 people per co-operative
- Retail co-operatives under First Nations and Métis control represent 71% of Aboriginal co-operatives, and account for 93% of annual sales of $250 million
- Average income for First Nations and Métis co-operatives: Retail co-ops (mainly grocery stores): $230 million; Fishing: $5.5 million; Forestry: $4.5 million
Pre-Confederation
Co-operatives and co-operation were forces in Saskatchewan well before the formation of the province in 1905. For thousands of years, Aboriginal collaborative societies prospered.

1761 The earliest recorded co-operative is formed in Scotland. Local weavers sold the contents of a sack of oatmeal at a discount, forming Fenwick Weavers’ Society.

1844 Rochdale Society of Equitable Pioneers establish a store owned by its members. They develop the ‘Rochdale Principles’ forming the basis for the modern co-operative movement.

1850-1864 Credit unions (financial co-operatives) are invented in Germany.

1895 First co-operative in Saskatchewan, a butter creamery is formed in Saltcoats.

1900s
1905 - 1929 Saskatchewan farmers begin ‘pooling’ their resources and marketing their products as a group. Buying clubs are formed during this period, leading to the formation of retail co-op stores.

1906 Prairie farmers led by E.A. Partridge organize the Grain Growers’ Grain Co., the first co-operative to register in the newly incorporated Province of Saskatchewan.

1910 Jewish Colonization Association forms 1st Western Canadian Credit Union in Wapella, SK.

1928 Retail co-op stores work together to form a wholesale co-operative, Federated Co-operatives Limited.

1930s Métis leaders James Brady and Malcolm Norris are involved in co-operatives in the North of the province and influential in the formation and early years of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (CCF) political party.

1935 The farmers in Regina establish Consumers’ Co-operative Refineries Ltd., now owned by Federated Co-operatives Ltd.

1937 The first officially chartered Credit Union in Saskatchewan, the Regina Hebrew Savings and Credit Union is formed in Regina.
1940s-50s Métis, First Nations and Aboriginal co-ops are active throughout Northern Saskatchewan, including fishing, fur and trapping, trading, wood products, farm co-operatives and even a credit union.

1949 Cumberland House Fisherman’s Co-op is established.

1949 The fishers’ co-op at Kinoosao on Reindeer Lake, is the first Aboriginal co-op incorporated in northern Saskatchewan.

1945 The Co-operators is started by a group of Saskatchewan farmers by pooling their money to offer insurance.

1945 The Co-operatives is founded by a group of Saskatchewan farmers by pooling their money to offer insurance.

1945 Arctic Co-operatives Limited, a co-operative federation owned and controlled by 31 co-operatives located in Nunavut, Northwest Territories, and northern Manitoba forms, operating in both English and Inuktitut.

1961 La Ronge Childcare Co-op Ltd. is founded in La Ronge, SK.

1962 Universal Medicare is launched in Saskatchewan. As a result of the Medicare program, the first co-op community health clinic opened in Saskatoon.

1962 Access Communications is incorporated in Regina. The telecommunications co-operative now operates across the province.

1985 The first debit card is piloted by credit unions in the Swift Current area.

1985 Sherwood Credit Union in Regina introduces the world’s first Automated Teller Machine (ATM).

1995 Welcome Bay Fishermen’s Co-op is established.

1995 The Many Nations Co-op Ltd., a brokerage house that specializes in pensions, benefits and insurance for First Nations has established bands in Edson, SK.

1995 Ohpahow Wawescikiwak Arts Marketing Inc., an arts and crafts workers co-op, is established on the Big River First Nation.

2009 Flying Dust Cree 8 Worker Co-op Ltd., a worker co-op with a market garden and greenhouse is established on the Flying Dust First Nation.
Co-ops are businesses and can do many things that non-profit associations cannot. Co-ops combine the basic principles of community development with a business approach, enabling people to turn local strengths into viable community owned enterprises.

Co-operatives differ from private corporations and non-profit corporations in three main ways:

1) USER-OWNED
The people who use a co-op usually buy a membership first, which makes them an owner. Membership gives them an equal share in the co-operative business.

2) USER-CONTROLLED
Co-operatives are democratic, which means each member gets one vote. Members elect a board of directors, and vote on all major decisions or issues.

3) USER-BENEFITTING
One of the main purposes of a co-operative is to give benefits to its members. Operations are geared to benefit members, including providing access to products or services that members weren’t able to get in their community before.

7 CO-OP PRINCIPLES

Every co-operative believes in and is formed around the same seven principles, known as the Co-operative Principles. The Principles outline how co-operatives put their values into action. The Principles are part of the International Co-operative Alliance’s Statement on the Co-operative Identity. Here is a summary of the Co-operative Principles:

1. VOLUNTARY AND OPEN MEMBERSHIP
Co-ops are voluntary organizations, open to everyone able to use their services and willing to accept the responsibilities of membership.

2. DEMOCRATIC MEMBER CONTROL
Co-ops are democratic organizations controlled by their members, who set policies and make decisions. The elected Board is accountable to the membership. Members have equal voting rights (one member, one vote).

3. MEMBER ECONOMIC PARTICIPATION
Members contribute equally to their co-operative’s capital (money or other assets). At least part of that capital is usually the common property of the co-op. Members usually receive limited compensation, if any, on the money they contributed to the co-op for their membership. Extra funds not spent on running the co-op may go to further developing the co-op and supporting other activities approved by the membership.

4. AUTONOMY AND INDEPENDENCE
Co-ops are autonomous, self-help organizations controlled by their members. If they enter into agreements with other organizations, including governments, or raise capital from external sources, they do so on terms that guarantee democratic control by their members and maintain their autonomy.

5. EDUCATION, TRAINING AND INFORMATION
Co-ops provide education and training for their members, elected representatives, managers, and employees so they can help effectively in developing their co-op. Educating new members - either by direct job-related training or even just about the various benefits of membership - is essential. A co-op is its members; without the members, the co-operative wouldn’t exist.

6. CO-OPERATION AMONG CO-OPERATIVES
Co-ops serve their members better and strengthen the co-operative movement by working together on local, national, regional and international levels.

7. CONCERN FOR COMMUNITY
Co-ops work to sustainably develop their communities through policies approved by their members. Co-ops are created to meet needs identified by community members. In some cases, this may mean access to healthy food or adequate housing, or with its surplus, the co-op may choose to contribute resources to the community directly.
Co-operatives reflect many of the same values and beliefs found among First Nations.

The outer circle of this chart shows Co-operative Values, while the inner circle depicts Shared Indigenous Values.

Shared Values

Given the collaborative and co-operative basis on which First Nations and non-First-Nations worked together for years, it should come as no surprise that co-operatives reflect many of the same values and beliefs found among First Nations.

The outer circle of this chart shows Co-operative Values, while the inner circle depicts Shared Indigenous Values.
TYPES OF CO-OPERATIVES

Insurance and Financial Co-operatives:
These co-operatives offer deposit, loan and investment services for members. Credit unions are the most common example of this type of co-operative.

Retail Co-operatives:
These co-ops provide their members with goods such as food, hardware, clothing and recreational gear. They range in size from small purchasing groups to large supermarket and retail supply organizations.

Service Co-operatives:
These co-ops provide services to their members for the benefit of the public or general welfare of the community. Types of services include housing, childcare, water supply, communications, energy, health care, transportation, communication, fire and rescue, and municipal services.

Producer & Marketing Co-operatives:
They act on behalf of producers to sell their products and/or allow members to share processing and packaging equipment and pool their marketing to reach more customers.

Worker or Employment Co-operatives:
These co-ops supply jobs to their workers. The workers are the member owners who run the business. They make all the important decisions, such as wages, production methods, and finances. Examples include: organic foods production, arts and entertainment, forestry, construction and home care sectors.

Multi-Stakeholder Co-operatives:
These co-ops have different categories of members, such as employees, investors and service recipients. They usually operate in the community development, home care and health care sectors. This type of co-op is not currently allowed under Saskatchewan legislation.

New Generation Co-operatives:
This is a newer type of co-operative that is usually involved in value-added agricultural processing, and which combines the features of a co-op with an investor-owned corporation.

Canada is home to 9,000 CO-OPERATIVES AND CREDIT UNIONS with over 18 million members.

See Appendix D: Resources for more information on other co-ops.
The idea of a co-operative is nothing new to First Nation people who exercised co-operative development long before the co-operative business structure became popular in Canada and elsewhere. In many ways, First Nations were the first co-operators. The first Aboriginal co-op was incorporated in 1945 in Saskatchewan, and focused on conducting business in the fisheries sector. Incorporations of Aboriginal co-ops were very popular in the 1970s and 1980s, to some extent in the 1990s.

In the past few years, we are seeing new Aboriginal co-ops forming in Saskatchewan. Various drivers and restrictions on Aboriginal co-ops in the north and south, both based on locality and government policies under the Indian Act, reveal interesting insights into why Aboriginal co-ops have been established and the diverse range of successes.

First Nations people worked together to achieve common goals to sustain their livelihoods and develop their communities and have always worked collaboratively and resiliently toward economic prosperity, with self-sustainability always being the end goal. The level of activity that occurs within contemporary First Nations communities and those living off-reserve has been controversial. In 2001, Aboriginal consumer co-ops were growing at a rate almost twice that of the retail sector or other consumer co-ops.
Co-operative businesses can be a way for First Nations communities to improve economic conditions while keeping decision-making powers and control with local people. Each co-operative is designed to meet the needs of the community it serves, so each co-op has a unique and locally-focused way of working. This section of the guide provides examples of how different types of co-ops are meeting the needs of their communities and looks at the benefits and challenges of developing First Nation co-operatives. Some key questions are presented for your consideration when developing a co-operative as a good option for your community.

PROFILE: CREE8 WORKER CO-OPERATIVE: FLYING DUST FIRST NATION

Mission Statement: "To develop sustainable, self-reliant livelihoods while promoting the need for healthy lifestyles, nutritious food consumption and food sovereignty and security at the Band level."

In 2009, the Riverside Market Garden began as eight people growing organic vegetables on two acres. By 2011 the workers incorporated as Flying Dust Cree8 Worker Co-operative, a worker-controlled organic market garden social enterprise. It now spans 27 acres, growing two different kinds of potatoes, carrots, onions, beans, herbs, cucumbers, corn, squash, kale, beets, peas, and a variety of tomatoes.

In 2013, they built a state-of-the-art storage facility with retail and commercial kitchen space included. Other acquisitions helping to develop this co-operative include a potato seed cutter, a potato-harvesting machine, and two potato trucks. In 2014, they added a full time staff person to coordinate their activities.

PROFILE: MUSKODAY WORKERS ORGANIC CO-OP

In 1999, the community at Muskoday launched an initiative to produce potatoes and grew and harvested about 450 tonnes. The band-managed project obtained sufficient training grants to hire every employable welfare recipient in the community to work on the farm for six months. This was sufficient time to qualify for employment insurance, which in turn opened doors to further training. Once the program ended; only 5% of the people involved went back on social assistance. For a variety of reasons, the project did not continue, but in 2005, several community members decided to revive the idea, with a twist.

They formed an organic growers’ co-op and began to produce potatoes and other vegetables organically, aiming to supply local and regional markets. Their co-op structure gave the participants a sense of ownership and decision-making power that reflected the collectivity of First Nations culture.

With support from their Band and Heifer International, they grew around seven hectares of potatoes and just over one hectare of other vegetables. They have also started planting fruit trees. The idea is to use mainly indigenous varieties and to avoid monocultures by inter-planting crops. A couple hundred kilometers of shelterbelts planted in the past encourage biodiversity. Project participants that take part in training that will net them a Green Certificate through Saskatchewan’s on-farm training program in agricultural production and management. In a one-year period, 11 families will be trained in the knowledge and practice of indigenous organic gardening, agro-ecology and organic food entrepreneurship. Currently produce goes to the CHEP Good Food Box program in Saskatoon, to 25 community elders and to the Muskoday school lunch program.

Muskoday First Nation has been working to create sustainable healthy economic benefits for their community and their consumers with organic farming.
PROFILE: NEECHI FOODS CO-OPERATIVE, LTD.

This worker co-operative has its roots in Winnipeg, Manitoba and was formed in early 1990. It operates as a grocery store, restaurant, fruit and vegetable courtyard, and arts market. Neechi, meaning ‘sister, brother, or friend’ in Cree and Ojibwa, was created to address food and employment security as well as community-building.

Originally Opened as Neechi Foods Community store in 1990, a major expansion occurred in 2012 when it became part of the revitalization of Main Street and helped to open the Neechi Commons Community Business Complex. This centre has the capacity to expand operations, include more community members, and increase the number of workers involved. In addition to the grocery store, restaurant, and arts centre, the new business complex includes a greater area to promote more Aboriginal artisans and musicians, a farmers’ market, a bakery, and specialty boutiques.

Funding for the development and expansion of Neechi Foods came in part from Provincial and Federal grants as well as from fundraising, namely the selling of shares to the general public. Slow and steady growth through stable annual sales and surplus invested back into the co-operative has created a strong foundation for all operations.

Neechi Foods Co-operative has received multiple awards, including the Green Globes certification for the design of the new building, which includes geo-thermal heating and cooling. Neechi Foods is also the recipient of the Excellence in Aboriginal Leadership Award.

Neechie Foods belongs to a number of larger business organizations including the Canadian Worker Co-operative Federation, the Aboriginal Chamber of Commerce and Food Matters Manitoba. The Co-operative is a purchasing partner of the Local Investment toward Employment program, and is a supplier partner with Winnipeg’s Social Purchasing Portal. These, and other partnerships, have contributed to the success of Neechi Foods Co-operative.

PROFILE: AMACHEWESPIMAWIN CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

The retail co-op in Stanley Mission, located on the Churchill River in northern Saskatchewan, has taken on the name that Cree people always called the area before it was renamed by missionaries: Amachachwespimawinhk. Just as the local community has taken ownership of the name, they've also taken ownership of the co-op.

The first Co-operative Association was established in Stanley Mission through a government initiative, in 1949. Eventually, by 1959, there were 6 co-ops operating in northern Saskatchewan: La Ronge, Stanley Mission, Deschambault Lake, Cumberland House and Wollaston, which together were known as the Northern Co-op Trading Services Ltd.

In 1980, the community of Stanley Mission decided it would be more beneficial for the community to establish their own Co-operative Association Membership Board and hire their own manager. Today, the Board of Directors is made up of community members who live and work on the reserve and in the hamlet of Stanley Mission. Due to effective succession planning strategies, local community members are able to lead the co-op with excellent leadership and management skills. The current manager is a community member.

In the early years, annual sales were approximately $300,000; and today the sales exceed $8 million. The Co-op is able to provide a wide selection of products at very reasonable prices for a small northern store. Also, customers who shop locally benefit greatly from their equity, which is considerably more than other co-operatives in general.

The co-operative also runs the first and only restaurant in the community, as well as a gas bar confectionary. The community reinvested their dividends for a period of time in order to achieve this goal of starting up a restaurant. Members now re-invest dividends to pay out 100% of the equity to the elderly when they reach sixty-five years of age.
BENEFITS AND CHALLENGES OF DEVELOPING A FIRST NATION CO-OPERATIVE

Developing a business as a co-operative has both benefits and challenges for any group or community. For First Nations specifically, there are additional benefits and challenges to be considered when deciding if a co-operative business will meet the needs of your community.

BENEFITS
- Shared values between the co-operative structure and First Nations people
- Co-operatives offer equitably shared profits, risk, ownership, and decision-making
- Co-operatives are a proven, sustainable business model.

CHALLENGES
- Perceptions and stereotypes
- Indian Act Legislation creates extra steps to creating a co-operative business
- Financing and securing loans can be more difficult, especially on-reserve
- Security can be exempt from the Indian Act, although sometimes to address these challenges, co-ops can lease assets instead of owning, so the title doesn't transfer.

QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER
1. Do you want a business that is owned and democratically controlled by the people who use the services?
2. Do you want a business that benefits the members and members have a say in making decisions?
3. Do you want a business that is a model for community development and job creation?
4. Do you have unique needs and goals that can be achieved through collective ownership?
5. Do you want to create self-sustainability through a shared vision of how this can be accomplished?

Note: co-op expertise and/or legal advice is always recommended.
Co-op Talk
Talk about ideas for improving your community with other community members. These talks will help you understand and identify common needs, such as access to unavailable services or access to products at fair prices. Make sure to involve the elders in your talks and invite them to share advice and support.

Pre-feasibility
This step builds confidence among potential members who are interested in participating in the co-operative. This stage informs whether a more in-depth study is needed, and identifies the areas of research that need to be focused on. The flexibility of the co-operative structure encourages adaptability, and can be tailored to provide any type of product or service, as long as the community itself values it as an opportunity for improvement. Some things to consider are:
• preliminary market review
• available technical and financial assistance
• does the local community want/support a co-operative business
• is a co-operative the best structure
• profit or non-profit co-op
• intended benefits to members, (e.g. quality, price)
• type of co-op
• can the minimum number of members be attracted

Co-op Development Meeting
This meeting includes an invitation and an agenda to all prospective members before the meeting. The agenda is of a general nature, and includes room for all members to speak and be heard equally. Some of the possible agenda items could include:
• Establish organization’s name, the organization’s mission statement, purpose, elect a board of directors, a secretary, and a treasurer. These are temporary positions, and an official election will take place at the organization’s first meeting after becoming incorporated.
• Prepare and submit an application for incorporation as a co-operative.
• SEE APPENDIX A: INCORPORATION PACKAGE

Conduct a Feasibility Study (also called a viability study)
This step is an in-depth look at whether an organization is economically possible or viable in the proposed community. Some of the considerations could include:
• Defining the organization’s objectives
• Consideration of costs, such as wages, materials, production costs, and any other financial resources necessary.
• Estimating as accurately as possible the potential sources of revenue, such as membership fees, fundraising, grants, credit union or bank loans, and other partners.
• Site assessment: considerations include identifying potential spaces that have the necessary facilities for the organization,
• Economic assessment: analysis of the cost effectiveness over the life-cycle of a business in terms of purchasing, operating, and maintaining an organization’s resources would be conducted to guide investment choices in initial and ongoing phases of an organization’s lifetime.
• Social assessment: this would be an analysis of the social environment for the proposed organization. Essentially, this area of study would consider how well received an organization might be, as well as how it would meet the needs of the existing social fabric. This is also an opportunity to make sure you build your co-operative business to incorporate and reflect First Nations spirituality and values into the business.
• Risk assessment: an organization may choose, as part of their feasibility study, to conduct a risk assessment that considers factors that have the potential to derail the project.

Develop the Framework
Discuss and determine the organization’s structure and define the different members involved. Discuss and determine what the governing bodies will be and what their roles will be within the organization. For example, you could clarify how your board of directors will work together. In addition, various other committees can be formed, such as a committee to draft bylaws, which provides parameters for the organization and are a requirement of incorporation.

Organize the Enterprise

PLAN ENTERPRISE OPERATIONS

The first year of operational planning should be established. Create goals for the short and long-term to establish sustainable success based on the original values and aims. Some key planning steps:

1. PLAN AND ORGANIZE START-UP FINANCING
   This is where you decide how much financing you will need for start-up and operations projected for the next three years. Some co-operatives have started with very little money, and slowly built up a reputation, clientele, and member base in order to be able to finance expansion costs. Some considerations include:
   • Decide how much a membership will cost
   • Determine financial operations for the first three years. This could include already identified projected costs and potential deficits or surplus
   • Research potential grants, and apply to relevant opportunities.
   SEE APPENDIX C: BUSINESS PLAN TEMPLATE

2. RECRUIT AND TRAIN STAFF
   Developing good human resource policy and strategy from the outset is key to any successful enterprise. At this stage, begin selecting and recruiting employees. You will need a training program and co-operative training program for each position.

3. ENSURE THE LEGALITY OF ALL OPERATIONS
   This is where you take care of any legal business requirements and authorizations, such as licenses, permits, a GST or Business number, etc.

Hold the Initial General Meeting
The plan for this meeting includes sending an invitation and an agenda to all prospective members before the meeting. The agenda should be of a general nature, and include room for all members to speak and be heard equally. Some key agenda items include:
• Adopt the bylaws, adopt the business plan, approve an outside auditor, approve the co-op membership, and elect the board of directors.

123 co-operatives in Canada are FIRST NATION, METIS, OR INUIT controlled or operated.

Northwest Territories, Nunavut, Nunavik, Northern Québec, and Northern Saskatchewan are home to 77 of these co-operatives.

There are 70 First Nations in Saskatchewan, 61 of which are affiliated to one of the nine Saskatchewan Tribal Councils. The total registered Indian population of Saskatchewan First Nations as of February 28, 2009 is 129,138. The five linguistic groups of First Nations in Saskatchewan are Cree, Dakota, Dene (Chipewyan), Nakota (Assiniboine) and Saulteaux.

Treaties 2, 4, 5, 6, 8 and 10 cover the Province of Saskatchewan.
TIPS FROM THE ELDERS

INTEGRATE a culturally based EMPLOYEE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

Talk with the elders in your COMMUNITY to ask their advice. Ideally there will be elders in the WORKPLACE.

Support your staff to build their SKILLS and make sure that training is SENSITIVE to Aboriginal cultures.

Design your human resource policies and organizational culture to work with and for your STAFF.

Make family a priority. KEEP work-life balance in your POLICIES AND BUSINESS.
